

CONGRESSMAN HENRY CUELLAR

Congressman Henry Cuellar has focused his public service career to seeing that every child gets the best education possible to prepare him or her to compete and succeed in the 21st century.

While at the state legislature, Congressman Cuellar authored landmark legislation that established the $300 million T.E.X.A.S. Grant program which increased students' access to higher education dramatically. There are now more students enrolling and graduating from colleges and universities.

In Laredo, Congressman Cuellar-who co-authored the tuition-revenue bond legislation-led the effort to build Texas A&M International University and established the Laredo Community College and Texas State Technical College partnership. Furthermore, Henry Cuellar helped establish the U.T. Health Science Center in San Antonio branch campus in Laredo, thus changing higher education in Laredo forever.

Congressman Cuellar's educational leadership and advocacy has been recognized by many national, state and local educational institutions. Most recently, he was honored as one of the top 100 Hispanics by "Hispanic Business Magazine".
